Admissions Requirements for Homeschooled Students

Homeschooled students are welcome to apply to CIA. The following TWO requirements must be met as part of their application process:

1. Proof of requirements met for a high school diploma. The following TWO documents must be submitted to fulfill this requirement.
 - a. Transcripts or the equivalent, signed by the parent, guardian, or homeschool instructor, that lists the secondary school courses completed by the applicant for grades 9–12 and the student's performance in each course.
 - b. An official document that attests that the homeschooled education meets the equivalency to what is taught in the high school district. This document may be provided by the state Department of Education (if provided by that state), the homeschool liaison within the student's school district, or from a school official in the high school district.

2. Official scores from either the SAT or ACT exams. (New York and California campuses only)

In lieu of these requirements, homeschooled students are welcome to submit official scores from the GED (General Education Diploma) or any other State approved equivalency assessment through TASC (Test Assessing Secondary Completion).

The CIA reserves the right to request any additional information or requirement as part of the application process.
